Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-6, 9, 10, 12, 13, 15 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 1 and 9, 10, 12, 15 and 20 claim functional descriptive material such as "Data signal for modifying a graphic scene...being made of... graphic objects...defined by at least one field...for constituting an image...including frames...include a command" which is not recorded on some computer-readable medium and is therefore non-statutory subject matter.

When functional descriptive material is recorded on some computer-readable medium it becomes structurally and functionally interrelated to the medium and will be statutory in most cases since use of technology permits the function of the descriptive material to be realized. Compare In re Lowry, 32 F.3d 1579, 1583-84, 32 USPQ2d 1031, 1035 (Fed. Cir. 1994) (Claim to data structure stored on a computer readable medium that increases computer efficiency held statutory) and Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1360-61, 31 USPQ2d at 1759 (claim to computer having a specific data structure stored in memory held statutory product-by-process claim) with Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory).

Claims 2-6 and 13 also claim functional descriptive material such as a "signal" providing further refinements, however the claims fail to provide functional descriptive material recorded on some computer-readable medium or some other significant independent physical act, and are similarly rejected as claims 1 and 9-15.

Art Unit: 2671

Applicant may be able to overcome Examiner's rejections by amending the claims to encompass statutory subject matter. If Applicant were to include language in the claims which indicates some practical effect of the performance of the method or the operation of the apparatus, such as recording a program on some computer-readable medium, or some other significant independent physical acts, the Examiner believes, at this time, such an amendment would render the application in condition for allowance, because when functional descriptive material is recorded on some computer-readable medium it becomes structurally and functionally interrelated to the medium and will be statutory in most cases since use of technology permits the

Response to Arguments

-Regarding claims 1-6 and 9-15 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101, the applicants argues that said claims are in the same format as example claim 13, page 37, of the "Examination Guidelines for Computer Related Inventions" the examiner disagrees. The cited claim 13 specifically states "A computer data signal embodied in a carrier ware", however the text of the applicants' claims does not include the previously underlined language. Therefore the rejection under U.S.C. 101 is affirmed and restated in the present office action.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 7, 8, and 16-19 are allowed.

function of the descriptive material to be realized.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).
